

"Our intent is to create a unique mix of largely locally-owned restaurant, retail and personal service businesses to provide a compelling destination for the residents and employees of Central Vancouver. Reintroducing the property as the mill captures one of the important historical foundations of our community from a commerce perspective."

Project Description

the mill (formerly Garrison Square) has been “reimagined” by Killian Pacific. Major renovations are winding up to bring an updated and inviting Pacific Northwest authentic aesthetic to the buildings. Exterior improvements include new wood trimmed facades, signage and landscaping. On the interior of many spaces concrete floors, wood decking and glulam beam ceilings are now exposed. Restaurants enjoy a new covered “four season” outdoor dining area and uncovered outdoor gathering areas for diners. Designed to key off of successful existing local tenants, the mill is an urban destination for the community providing a comfortable, attractive setting for shopping and dining. Carefully curating experienced successful restaurants is a prime focus of Killian Pacific. In addition to a large daytime population seeking lunch options, the trade area has a diverse residential demographic with new young families and established high income residents located along the Heights Ridge and Columbia River waterfront seeking new dining and shopping opportunities.
